VOL II No.2 * THE NEWSLETTER OF THE HASKELL FAMILY ASSOC. * WINTER 1985

Greetings to our cousins everywhere!! We are off and running with this the second newsletter for the family by the family. The present issue marks the rebirth of both the Haskell Family Association and The Haskell Journal, both on an international scale. The family has spread far and wide and our purpose is to reestablish links lost through time and distance and to preserve our heritage for future generations.

The newsletter of any family organization is the heart of the association. No other means of communication can be as efficient or as inexpensive. Above all else, however, it remains as a permanent record of the association, and the heritage of the Haskell Family. At present, we have no officially appointed officers with everyone serving in a voluntary capacity. If you have talent and an interest in helping, your efforts are vitally needed. Let us hear from you.

To print and mail the newsletter will consume most of our funds. In addition to members and subscribers, a select group of libraries and genealogical societies will receive the quarterly editions of the Haskell Journal. In this way, we hope to inform the largest possible audience of our existence and our activities thus insuring our continuing growth. The newsletter is designed to be as meaningful, interesting and useful as possible to all who receive it.

If you know of Haskells living in your vicinity who might be interested in the association, send us their names and addresses for a complimentary copy of the Journal. One never knows when someone will catch the genealogical "bug".

We need your input and letters, your inquiries about missing ancestors and your responses. Tell us what you think should be included and we will do our best to comply. Biographies, autobiographies, news events, histories of Haskell lives and adventures, newspaper cuttings on current family news are all respectfully solicited.

Meanwhile we are pleased to announce a family history is currently in preparation by the officers of The College of Arms in London. While mainly concerned with matters concerning armorial bearings, their professional genealogists have agreed to complete the tracing of the English origins of the Haskell Family sponsored by your association. It should perhaps be noted that the prestigious College of Arms celebrated their quincentenary last year dating from the founding by King Richard III in 1484. The officers of the College are members of the Royal Household being the Sovereign's representative in all matters heraldic and genealogical.

Finally, a note about our masthead. The design depicts the Haskell arms as found in Burke's GENERAL ARMOURY, "Vaire ar and sa. Crest: On a mount an apple tree fructed proper." The use of this device as an illustration in no way implies any entitlement to bear these arms as a right, and no such entitlement is claimed. The subject of arms will be covered in a future issue.

TRIBUTE
IN RECOGNITION AND IN MEMORIAM

In this, the issue marking the rebirth of the HASKELL JOURNAL, we wish to take the opportunity to recognize Burnette Gregor Haskell (1857-1907) As the founder of the American Haskell Family Assn. and the HASKELL JOURNAL in 1898, his career is worthy of far more than a passing glance.

Burnette G. Haskell was born 13 June 1857, in Sierra County, California and died 16 November 1907 in San Francisco. He was the scion of the Rochester, Mass. family of Deacon Roger Haskell (Burnette G.<sup>7</sup>, Edw. Wilder Jr.<sup>8</sup>, Edw. Wilder<sup>7</sup>, Prince<sup>6</sup>, Nathaniel<sup>5</sup>, Mark<sup>4</sup>, Deacon Roger<sup>3</sup>, Mark<sup>2</sup>, Roger<sup>1</sup>.

(cf. Chronicles of the Haskell Family, pp.32-5, and pp.90-120). This Rochester family produced many eminent persons, among them, Ira J Haskell author of the cited text, and was responsible for establishing the original family association in 1911. Others in this distinguished family will be covered in detail in future issues.

Edward Wilder Haskell Jr., Burnette's father, was a school teacher who went to California in the 1849 Gold Rush, appearing in the 1850 Census, aged 31, located in Yuba County. Legendary Haskell Peak reputedly the source of the Mother Lode in adjoining Sierra County is named for him. Whether he was successful as a miner is not clear but he was later a successful rancher in southern California having acquired property involving oil interests, Rancho Santa Paula y Santocoy, and property in the vicinity of San Francisco. He married about 1856, Marie Antoinette Briggs (d.1903) and they had the following children:

Burnett Gregor Haskell (1857-1907) m. Anna Hayden Feder

Helen Montmorenci Haskell (1860-1942) m. Stephen S. Thomas, an artist.

Edward Prince Haskell (1865-?)

Benjamin Briggs Haskell (1867-1902)

Burnette attended California schools, The University of California, read law and was admitted to the bar in the state in 1879. He became a curious mixture of lawyer-socialist, labor leader, writer, politician, orator, genealogist, romancer, economist, civic leader and eccentric but above all an idealist and never dull.

He was, perhaps, first and foremost a leader of social reform and early became a supporter of the International Workingmens Assoc., a labor movement with a secret membership, and editor of its journal TRUTH whose motto was "TRUTH is five cents a copy and dynamite forty cents a pound."

For many years Burnette appeared on San Francisco's Grant Ave. on Sunday mornings in the vicinity of his law office at Market St. or on the steps of the nearby branch U.S. Mint at Fifth and Mission Sts. to harangue his adherents or anyone else who would listen. Chief of Police Patrick Crowley had Haskell arrested several times as a disturber of the peace, but being an astute attorney, Haskell always managed to have his case dismissed and continued his work as a social evangelist.

He was described in a San Francisco newspaper article of 1896 as being of medium height and always dressing neatly with "...nothing in particular about his appearance to attract the attention of the observer, save his large blue eyes, which stand prominently forward. His enunciation is clear and distinct, his language well chosen, his sentences well rounded and at times gilded with eloquence."

Taking his idea from Edward Bellamy's "Looking Backward", Burnette and about 100 others founded a cooperative colony at Topolobampo, Sinaloa State, Mexico on the Gulf of California. As with most utopian endeavors, the colony failed after about a year and a half. Haskell was repudiated by his followers who had to work their passage home on sailing ships.

He consistently neglected a lucrative law practice specializing in probate, land and admiralty located at 1346 Market St. in San Francisco, to toil in the thankless vineyards of labor and social reform. The writer, during many years at sea, was well aware of the sweeping reforms brought about by Andrew Furuseth, a Norwegian seaman turned labor reformer on the West Coast and his crusading seamen's union. He was responsible for the most significant improvements in sailor's working conditions. Accounts indicate that ship's crews experienced by far the worst conditions of all workers, making their unionization in a major port like San Francisco an absolute necessity in eliminating the worst abuses. What was not known was that in 1881 Frank Roney emerged with Furuseth as one of the principle radical reformers, became president of the San Francisco Trade Assembly, and in 1891, a major organizer of the Coast's Seaman's Union. Burnette G. Haskell shared an equally important but far less publicized role in these drastic labor reform movements.

With the encouragement and support of several prominent businessmen of San Francisco, Haskell began publication of THE HASKELL JOURNAL, "A Monthly Magazine" in January, 1898. This was, as Ira J. Haskell stated "...a truly unique attempt in the field of genealogy and far in advance of its time." Regrettably, the publication failed after only four issues due in large part to insufficient financial support.

Meanwhile, Haskell had been active in numerous other projects and became co-founder of the Kaweah Cooperative Commonwealth, located partly in what is now Sequoia National Park, California. With fellow labor leader James J. Martin, he headed a group filing claims on timber land near Visalia in 1885. Their intent was to establish a colony based on Laurence Gronlund's Cooperative Commonwealth. Kaweah's idealistic "deed of settlement" stated its aims as "To improve the health, secure the happiness and perfect the wellbeing of each and every member. And as well to propagate and extend in the world at large, the idea of universal and just cooperation."

The colony, located in eastern Tulare County on the banks of the Kaweah River, attracted about 400 people during its lifetime (1885-1892). An eighteen mile long access road was begun 8 October 1886. Nearly four years later, in June, 1890, the road was completed. The road, which can still be travelled today, reaches an elevation of 8000 feet. Haskell's role in the colony is perpetuated in the prominent land feature known as Haskell's Bluff.

The greatest material asset the colony had was its timber holdings which proved to be the point of dispute over which the commune failed. The U.S. Government, anxious to crush what they perceived as a "menace", and to protect the huge private California timber interests, evicted the colonists in the name of "preservation" in September, 1890. However, there was far less concern with land preservation than with the destruction of a social experiment. Ironically, the site at Kaweah is commemorated by a plaque officially recognizing the utopian scheme by the Federal Government.

The San Francisco newspapers of the time had a field day, the CHRONICAL was opposed to the colony while the TIMES stated sympathetically (11Nov1891)"..the whole machinery of the government was being set in motion to starve out a body of industrious, inoffensive and intelligent people."

"The end came in January , 1892, when the trustees were indicted for using the mails to defraud by sending out colony literature and soliciting donations. On 18 January 1892, Haskell was arrested and had to plead "abject poverty" to his $3000 bail; he was finally released after the bail was reduced to $500. When the case came to trial, the jury promptly acquitted him on the grounds of insufficient evidence.

Haskell had written,"We meant to create amid the hills an ideal commonwealth, the Fraternal Republic of which the world will always dream." In an article published in OUT WEST in 1902, he wrote, "We were not fit to survive and we died. But there was no bribe money in our pockets; and beaten and as ragged as we are, we are not ashamed.. And is there no remedy, then, for the evils that oppress the poor? And is there no surety that the day is coming when justice and right shall reign the earth? I do not know;but I believe and I hope, and I trust."Haskell died on 16 November 1907, poor and friendless.

 THE UNFINISHED STORY.....

Clarissa Harlowe Barton(1821-1912), known historically as "Clara Barton" founder of the American Red Cross and called "Angel of the Battlefield" began her work on the battlefields of the American Civil War at the Second Battle of Bull Run in August, 1862.Enroute to Washington Armory Square Hospital while taking supplies to convalescents, she learned of the terrible slaughter and knowing that she would be needed, wrote hastily "...I leave immediately for the battlefield...."

With the help of her assistants, Mrs. Ada Morrell and Miss Lydia F.

Haskell, an old friend from New Jersey, she loaded emergency relief and medical supplies into a railway boxcar and arrived at Fairfax Station, Virginia next day. How she persuaded the military authorities to let her go to the front with the army in full retreat is a mystery, but she made her appearance at Fairfax along with her two assistants, perched on the pile of crates of her emergency supplies to succor the wounded and maimed. Miss Lydia Haskell of New Jersey has not been further identified.

QUERIES POLICY

Genealogical inquiries will be listed in the JOURNAL as a free service to members and subscribers. While the name and address of the person making the inquiry will be published, respondents are asked to send a copy of the reply to the Association so that the entire membership will benefit from the exchange. Since there was a strong tendency for our ancestors to use the same first names for several generations it is necessary to include at least one date and one place in each query. Also, anyone desiring help in their research may inquire of the genealogists who, although not professionals, will provide every assistance possible. We do request that you enclose a stamped self addressed envelope or two International Reply Coupons as there are no funds available for postage.

It should be noted that we have a complete birth/marriage/death index for the UK in the name Haskell from 1837 to 1935, and the International Genealogical Index (IGI) complete for the UK and new England. We will be glad to look up any entries for members and subscribers.

ORGANIZATION

THE HASKELL JOURNAL is the official publication of the Haskell Family Association. The reorganization of the Association is the brainchild of Winthrop A. Haskell of West Germany. Win has been the guiding light of the research that has been carried out over the last five years in Southwest England, the ancestral home of the Haskell Family. He is our European based genealogist.

The editor of the JOURNAL is Ola Mae Haskell, an avid genealogist from Alabama. All articles and queries should be sent to Ola Mae.

Our U.S. based genealogist is Marion Anderson of Maryland. All genealogical data that was sent with your applications has been sent to Marion with copies to Win. Continue to send all future data to Marion.

The Publisher of the JOURNAL and Treasurer of the Association is Allan Haskell of Kentucky. All membership inquiries should be sent to Allan.

RESOLUTION

Resolved, That we, the members of the American descendants of the Haskell family originating in Charlton Musgrove, county Somerset, England, of which Roger William and Mark Haskell are the progenitors and sons of William Haskell, churchwarden, of the aforesaid parish, wishing to devise some means of recognition for the unique services and abiding interest in the Haskell Family by the former Rector of the aforesaid parish of Charlton Musgrove, the Reverend Kenneth Thomas, do declare the Reverend Thomas an Honorary Member of the Haskell Family and Honorary Member for Life of the International Haskell Family Assoc.

Resolved, That we hereby express our sense of indebtedness to the Reverend Kenneth Thomas for his long service to the aforesaid parish of Charlton Musgrove as spiritual mentor, enthusiastic historian dedicated to the preservation of its priceless historical heritage, devoted friend, patient guide, and ever willing helper to the endless annual pilgrimage of American Haskell descendants.

Resolved, That we recognize in that tolerance and amenability the evidence of a generous heart and we desire to express our sense of obligation, recognition and appreciation.

How and when did the first Haskells arrive in California? To answer this and other questions regarding the migration of the Haskell family is the subject of the first major research project to be undertaken by the reactivated Haskell Family Assoc.

If you know the names, dates, and circumstances of the migration of your earliest ancestor to your part of the world, please share the information with the rest of the members. We will compile and edit your responses to provide an overall view of family migration over the last 300 years. The results will be published in a future edition of the Haskell Journal.

To provide some clues to the California members, we have extracted the following names from the 1850 California Census Returns:

THE PERILS OF GENAEOLOGICAL RESEARCH
excerpt from
The Haskell Journal
Vol. I No. 2 February, 1898

Among the hundreds of letters that I have received have been quite a number asking the editor personally for his own genealogy. His modesty has prevented him thus far from giving it. But since the Haskell Journal is not published for profit, and since every Haskell in the United States is presumed to be upon the editorial staff, and their assistance is demanded in solving the various problems connected with the Haskell history, I have made up my mind to yield to the request noted above and to state something concerning my own origin.

I married a widow who had a step-daughter. My father married the step-daughter. That made my wife the mother-in-law of her father-in-law and made my stepdaughter my stepmother, and thus my father became my stepson. Then my stepmother, stepdaughter of my wife, had a son; the boy was, of course, my brother because he was my father's son. But he was also the son of my wife's step-daughter and therefore her grandson. And that made me the grandfather of my step-brother. Then my wife had a son, his name is Astaroth; thus my mother-in-law, the stepsister of my son is also his grandmother because he is her stepson's child. My father-in-law is the brother-in-law of my child because his stepsister is his wife. I am therefore the brother of my own son who is also the child of my step-grandmother. I am my mother's brother-in-law, her name is Maria Briggs Haskell and she is still living after this. My wife is her own child's aunt and I always thought there was something weak in her mental makeup or she would never have married me. But the most peculiar matter of this whole affair is this, that while my son is my father's nephew, I am certainly, absolutely, and conclusively my own grandfather. And this can be demonstrated by all the rules of logic. Of course there is not a word of truth in all this thing but it proves that Shoel itself has no terror like those inflicted upon the editor in the attempt to connect the missing links in the Haskell family, without further information, and it enforces the lesson that every one of you people ought to be particular in filling out your blanks so as not to mix up the relations too much.

A mixup is bad for the community.

I trust that this will satisfy those people who want to know where I came from, and especially that it will make you all careful concerning your dates and names, and induce you all to send $2 so you may know where you are at hereafter.

CAPTAIN HENRY HASKELL
PRIVATEER

In 1803, two years before Trafalgar and twelve years before Waterloo and Napoleon's final downfall, England was engaged in mortal combat with France. The British fleet roamed far and wide protecting England's overseas possessions and a tight blockade was imposed on French ports. However, while the war at sea went well, British land forces were in a weakened condition. Seizing the opportunity, Napoleon began planning an invasion.

On 8 June 1803, Captain Henry Haskell Master of the Portsmouth vessel Trimmer personally appeared before the Right Honorable the Lord Commissioner of the British Admiralty and applied for letters of Marque and Reprisal "...for apprehending, seizing and taking the Ships, Vessels and Goods belonging to the French Republic, or to any Persons being Subjects of the French Republic.."

The Trimmer was described as "35 tons burthen, British built, with one mast, mounting 4 four pounder carriage guns and 8 swivel guns, manned by twenty men, armed with twenty small arms, twenty cutlasses, ten barrels of powder, thirty rounds of great shot and about 100 weight of small shot." She was "victualled for three months, equipped with two suits of sails and three anchors, three cables and about 200 weight of spare cordage." Principle crew members were listed as John Chiswick, Lieutenant; Wm. Nice, Gunner; John Jones, Boatswain; Wm. Procter, Carpenter; Edward James, Cook; and John Thompson, Surgeon. Captain Haskell was listed as "...sole Owner and Setter-out of the said ship." (HCA 26/88).

On 22 June, these intrepid adventurers captured the French brig La Flore westward of the Scilly Islands and took their prize into Plymouth, Devon.

According to the depositions of the French Master, Captain Marie Francois Henri Fils, the Trimmer audaciously seized the French vessel virtually under the nose of patrolling HMS Hussar under the command of Capt. Wilkinson of the Royal Navy. As the Hussar was to leeward, she was unable to effect the capture and did not reach the other two vessels until about 11AM of the following day. The Master of the French vessel "...being dissatisfied with the conduct of the privateer captors.." asked for and received permission to return to port on the HMS Hussar.

At the time of her capture, the La Flore was on a voyage from Saint Domingo to Havre de Grace with a complement of 25 persons consisting of her crew, five survivors of a shipwreck, and six passengers, all French citizens. The cargo consisted of sugar, coffee, cotton, indigo, dye wood, lignum vitae, mahogany logs, hides and 12 hogsheads of rum.

The minutes of the prize court show the case opened on 18 July 1803, stating the Trimmer of Portsmouth, Henry Haskell, Master, had taken as a prize the French vessel La Flore and brought her into Plymouth. On 4 October 1803 an interim decree for condemnation was made. (HCA 29/2). The following minute book (HCA 29/2) shows a claim had been placed for HMS Hussar as a "joint captor." The case was still in progress on 19 December 1803, and apparently continued for some six years. In the end, little Trimmer had to share her prize in a decree which stated the two vessels were "joint captors" after all presumably because the Hussar sighted and was sighted from the La Flore before being boarded by the Trimmer.

Captain Henry Haskell is believed to have been a brother of Captain Richard Haskell, Master of the trading vessel Duke of Portland of Portsea-Portsmouth who married first Charity Alford of Portsmouth at Alverstoke on 30 June 1793 and secondly Sophia Hall at Portsea on 20 September 1805.

The Haskell family of Portsea-Portsmouth arrived in this seacoast area around 1690 and seems to have been the main seafaring branch of the family in England. Many more noted mariners can trace their roots to this branch of the family.
